Property Description

Located in the Quizarra area of Pérez Zeledón, this exceptional property of a little over six acres offers a rare combination of comfortable living, rich biodiversity, and thoughtfully implemented sustainable land use. Set within the Alexander Skutch Biological Corridor, an internationally recognized conservation area, the property enjoys a privileged natural setting known for its extraordinary plant and wildlife diversity, while still offering easy, year-round access via a public paved road suitable for all vehicle types. The property features two residences. The main home is a charming and well-designed four-bedroom, three-bathroom house, created with comfort, efficiency, and harmony with the surrounding environment in mind. Abundant windows throughout the home maximize natural light and cross-ventilation, significantly reducing the need for fans or artificial lighting. This smart design keeps the interior bright, airy, and naturally comfortable in Quizarra's mild, pleasant year-round climate.
